

Crash tests

evaluate the passive safety of cars, with each car being subjected to several pre-defined impacts.

The first official homologation crash test in Czechoslovakia was carried out in 1972.

Nowadays, ŠKODA AUTO operates its own crash lab that enables two cars to be accelerated into each other at speeds of up to 65 km/h, or one vehicle at up to 120 km/h.